Dear parents,

Time is certainly flying by; the children have done well and worked very hard this year. It's exciting! Therefore, I have decided to change their usual holiday homework a bit this time. Because they are doing quite well in their grammar work, I'd like to focus instead on their writing.

We've talked quite a lot in class about the difference between fiction and nonfiction writing. Now it's their turn! The students will be able to choose an animal they'd like to write about. I have included four fact sheets. They can choose one of those animals, or they can do research on their own. I would like the children to pick an animal and read the fact sheet. After that, they should fill out the Animal Research Worksheet (found on the class's homework webpage, (<https://www.creativeenglishworld.com/ce1-wednesday-homework>), with information from the fact sheet.

Once the Animal Research Worksheet is complete, students will write about what they have learned.

The students can choose a:

- gorilla,
- wolf,
- octopus,
- flamingo, or
- an animal of their choice.

Students will be expected to discuss their animal report or story when we return to class.

Beyond the homework, please be sure to include English in their daily activities: in conversation, television, reading together, etc. Thank you for your cooperation and have a great holiday break!

Where to find facts about your animal

Fact sheets on gorillas, wolves, octopuses and flamingos can be found on the class's homework webpage. Information can also be found directly at the following websites.
